ADVERTISEMENTS

TO YOU, MR. RALSTON, our highly respected leader, friend, and principal, we, the Class of June, 1940, dedicate our yearbook. Your guiding hand and warm, human understanding have aided us in overcoming the many obstacles that have faced us during our stay in Central; your friendly spirit and truly noble character have been a constant source of inspiration to us; your good judgment could always be counted on to solve puzzling questions fairly and impartially; your gracious, kindly smile and ready words of greeting have endeared you in the hearts of the teachers as well as pupils of Central High School. We shall never forget the kind advice you have given us and we shall uphold the ideals you have helped to instill in us always.

A T I O N

To Our Teachers

GRATITUDE may be heartfelt, but it is often hard to express. This is true in our case. Since the first day we came to you, four years ago, ignorant, restless, frightened, eager, you have given us a precious share of your time, experience, and wisdom. You taught us that honesty, fair play, ambition, and determination are qualities to be desired. You showed a sympathetic interest in all our problems and encouraged any latent ability you discovered in us.

Because of your invaluable help and guidance, we shall enter life well prepared. May you find a reward for your efforts in the future achievements of your many students.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Miss Martha Hastings, those lines, from a fine helping hand
Will make our book look artistically grand.

Mr. Allan Turnbull, your camera you've used with great skill
In taking "informals" with patience, good will.

Doc Smith, due to efforts so steady, untiring,
This graduation of ours will be truly inspiring.

Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, you've helped us a lot with corrections
We've tried hard to follow prose and rhythmic suggestions.

Mr. Sam Boyar, we say you're the diligent kind
"Ad" and "ad" you've helped us to find.

Miss Mary Farrell, as ever so smiling and sweet,
You've well done your share to make things complete.

Miss Emma Hough, to you we owe so much,
Decorations galore, with artistic touch.

Mrs. Mabel Welles, you paint so grand,
You transformed our gym into a fairyland.

So, to you, generous helpers, as we wave adieu,
Here's a simple, but truly meant, heart-sent, "Thank you."

SENIOR RECEPTION—JANUARY, 1940

EDITORIAL

"CONTACT," called the mechanic and stepped back. The pilot smiled and waved. With a great roar, the airplane left the earth and soared into the sky, leaving behind in a cloud of dust a tense, hopeful, waiting crowd whose eyes followed the plane until it became a mere speck on the horizon and whose lips uttered a prayer that the young aviator would have no mishaps on his first solo flight.

The confident pilot making his trial flight represents the members of the graduating class, eager to get started on the building of their careers. With the aid of his plane, the flyer was able to conquer space; with the aid of the knowledge we have gained during our years of schooling, we hope to conquer the Future. The crowd at the airport, anxiously watching the start of the flight, represents our parents, our teachers, our friends.

For years, they have guided and shielded us; each one has done his bit in shaping our characters and molding our minds. From them, we have learned the value of honesty, integrity, fair play, and good sportsmanship. They have instilled in our hearts a love for all that is good and fine in the world. They have taught us kindness, the willingness to help others not so fortunate as ourselves; the ability to think clearly and impartially; the courage to defend our opinions and convictions; and a long list of character building lessons. Equipped scientifically and morally, we are venturing out into the world alone. The future is shrouded in mystery but we are not afraid for on our side we have courage, the tireless energy and endurance of youth, ambition that drives us on when things look black, and practical knowledge. We accept the challenge and are ready, willing, and able to take off on our "solo flight."

PROPHECY

SCOOP SCHORNSTEIN, ace reporter on the N. Y. Chronicle, listened with amazement to the words of his city editor, JOHN BARRASSO. He had just been told that Professor WALTER WASSMER had actually invented a rocket ship that would fly to Mars!

"It's all true," asserted BARRASSO. "CARL PRICE, our Washington correspondent, just told me the whole story. He was waiting in the Senate House for an interview and accidentally overheard Senators ARTHUR CHERNIN and PETER BOCAGE discussing the affair.

"Professor WASSMER, in collaboration with LOUIS D'ALONZO, a scientist, and SOL POLLACK, a chemist, invented the plane and has the U. S. Government interested in it. They're building a model ship now and if the experiments are successful we'll soon have regular passenger service between the Earth and Mars. As a protection against spies who might try to steal the plans and threaten his life, WASSMER is living somewhere in New York posing as a small-town engineer. The only clue CARL was able to get is that he's buying his supplies from the Mellville Aeronautical Works. I want you to find him and get me a series of exclusive interviews."

"Leave it to me," was the confident reply. "After all, there are only 6,000,000 inhabitants in New York."

As SCOOP turned to leave, BARRASSO added, "Better take DONALD CARLOCK along. Tell him to get all the pictures he can."

Anxious to get started, SCOOP ran in search of CARLOCK (nearly knocking over reporters, MARY ROMMEL and LEONORE SOROKMAN, as they stood comparing notes with sports writer, JOHN ANDERS). He hurriedly explained the case to the photographer and the two started off.

Reaching the front office, SCOOP stopped and asked ANITA RINSKY, the switchboard operator, to get him the address of the aeronautical works. While waiting the men spoke to secretaries HELEN KADUBEZ, GEORGIA KARANASOS and GERTRUDE ZEITLER.

Inside the office of the Mellville Aeronautical Works, SCOOP approached the reception clerk, IRMA FOSTER, and asked to see MR. MICHAEL BATTAGLIA, the manager.

He was told that Mr. BATTAGLIA was in conference with ANTHONY DOTO, CARMEN RUSSO, JULIUS BODIN, and NORMAN THRAN, the company accountants, but that he could see CELIA BRISGEL, the manager's private secretary. MISS BRISGEL couldn't recall the name WASSMER and asked stenographer, NANCY CAPANO, to direct him to the office of KATHERINE KALLIANES, the Sales Manager.

SCOOP was beginning to feel disgusted and impatient with being sent from person to person and suggested that if he spoke to one of the mechanics that might help. RAY MARLATT of the office staff took him to the field in back of the plant where RUDOLPH POLL, WILLIAM HANLEY, and FRANK LYONS were working on a new plane for aviatrix CARMELA DI DONATO. JOE DUDEK, overhearing the conversation, strolled over and offered, "I'm pretty sure I know who you want. This Mr. WASSMER transacts most of his business with the company through our crack salesman JACK BUCKLEY."

As no one knew where to find BUCKLEY, SCOOP started out to look through the plant alone. He asked TOM CARAGLIA, DAN D'AGOSTINO and LARRY GUARINO if they saw the salesman but they were too busy at their task of tool making to answer. JOHN HALL, conferring with the other aeronautical engineers MILTON MARCUS, JAMES MARINUCCI, and WALTER DEVORE, told him to see the business manager FRED PURCELL. After consulting his secretary KATHERINE BARKOW, PURCELL gave him the discouraging news that BUCKLEY was not working that day.

Deciding that nothing more could be done without him, SCOOP returned to his car and suggested to DON, "Let's go and have supper and start again tomorrow."

Forgetting business the two rode gaily to the Happy Inn owned and operated by JAMES SOBKA. The music was furnished by HORACE BARDARI and his orchestra and the vocalist was MARGARET YANNECE. At the table next to them sat Coach IRWIN ALBOUM and the members of his championship-holding basketball team—CHARLES SCOTT, ATTILIO BRACCIOFORTE, BEN LARDIERE, AL LEVEY, and JOSEPH GARGANO. At another table SUSAN TSIRIKOS, DORIS WATERMAN, and ANN MORGOSH, co-authors of the best seller "High School Love" were having dinner with the illustrators of the book. MARY HEYMAN and ETHEL DADEY. JOHN BROVACO, the noted comedian entered with BETTY PASTORE and LORRAINE HILLS, singers on his radio program, and stopped to chat with astronomers LOUIS BERGE, JOE MESSINA, and the bashful forest ranger JOHN BOCK.

The next morning, SCOOP again appeared at the Mellville offices. EILEEN LEARY, FLORENCE MARTIN and RHUNETTE NIXON, all busily typing, told him that BUCKLEY and another salesman EDWARD WARDELL had just left.

Holding his hat, SCOOP ran out of the building just in time to see two men get into a roadster. Bolting into his car, he followed them to a large building which BUCKLEY entered. SCOOP dashed after him; in one office and out the next. Not even the sight of models OLGA TUTELA and VERNA BENN posing for ANNA MELNIK in the latter's photography studio could stop him. In the offices of the City Advertising Company he collided with FLORENCE BRIGGS, MARY RAFTOPOULAS, and LORRAINE SWIDESKA, who were standing in a group talking to co-workers MARIE LA MOTTA, FILOMENA COSSENTINO, and JOSEPHINE PANIGROSSO. With a mumbled "Excuse me" he left and continued his search. The studio of music teacher JAMES CLOSE was his next stop and there he glimpsed concert pianists HELENE ROYSTON and ANNA DIMESTRIA and LAURA ANNICCHIORICO, Metropolitan opera star.

He finally admitted that he had lost sight of BUCKLEY and slowly started down the stairs. Unbeknown to him the clock had struck noon and he found himself surrounded by many hungry young secretaries—HELEN CELESTE, VIRGINIA PUTH, SPLENDORE DI ANTONIO, JOSEPHINE ONYSKO, OLGA YANESON, BERYL LEVY, and DOROTHY GOCKELER among them.

Luck was with him, for as he reached the street he glimpsed BUCKLEY driving away in his car. Again he resumed his chase and narrowly missed getting a ticket from officer SALVATORE ALLOCCA. Into the General Hospital strolled the unsuspecting salesman and right behind him ran SCOOP. In the corridor, nurses BETTY LIBERO, FANNIE TOBIA, LUCILLE MARRA and DOROTHY ROWETT were conversing with DOROTHY DE SORDI, the hospital dietitian. SONIA KOWALCHUK, a happily married matron, hurried by on her way to see her son who had the measles. Behind her walked dress designers OLGA DOLYNNY and ESTHER CIBELLIS on their way to see THERESA SCOLA who, along with MILDRED MARKS modeled their clothes and who had sprained her ankle. At the hospital desk stood BUCKLEY getting information from FRANCES NEMECEK and MADELINE ARAGONA. SCOOP approached him and after telling him that he was an old friend of WASSMER'S and had heard that he knew where he lived, asked for the professor's address.

The apartment house in which the professor lived was situated next to a gift shop owned jointly by BETTY FRANC, GRACE SCHROEDER, HELEN CUNERTY and MURIEL McCANN. While looking for the professor's name in the list in the lobby, he noticed that DOROTHY KING and ANNE CRISAFULLI, who taught in the same high school, lived together. Bill collector NICK DE FEIS, whom he met in the hall, directed him to the inventor's apartment.

Once inside WASSMER'S rooms he used all his wits and tact to obtain the information he desired, but to no avail. Finally, in desperation, he invited the professor to go to the theatre and a night club with him that night, thinking that perhaps in that way he could win his confidence. The professor accepted.

The play that evening was excellent, due perhaps to the fact that CLARE McDERMOTT and SYLVESTER POTRO were in the cast. The men in charge of the settings were JAMES POLITAN and GEORGE MOORE. After the play, they went backstage to see the stars and were greeted by script girl, LA RENE MARLOWE, and the producer's secretary, ASSUNTA CORRIDI.

In the nightclub, Scoop ordered a ringside table. EARL DE FRANZA and his band were swinging out and JACQUELINE SAVANNAH warbled the latest blues songs. Professor WASMER derived a great deal of pleasure from looking at the celebrities all about them. JAMES FULCHER, the daring aviator, came in with FRANK GAGLIANO and GEORGE MANGAN, two Wall Street brokers. Opposite them sat the noted novelist GERALDYNE IRIS with the winner of many art awards, EDNA UMSCHWEIS, and the Fifth Avenue clothes modle SYLVIA KESSLER. Poetress DOROTHY COSTELLO passed their table as did OTTO WOLF, the politician, smoking a big black cigar. One entire corner was reserved for the "Office Workers League" which was having a convention. The members present included SYLVIA WEINSTEIN, EDITH GERLACH, HELEN DEL TUFO, COLUMBIA LUCIANI, LORA CORSANO and SALLY BRODEN.

After looking around several times, the Professor startled Scoop by ordering a cocktail. "I never had one before," he confided, "but I'd like to try." When he finished gulping down his drink he began to look a little drowzy and dazed.

A little later, in the privacy of their taxi, Scoop again questioned the Professor. This time he was successful for the excitement of the evening and the drink had loosened WASMER'S tongue. In a short time Scoop had the whole story—all about the rocket ship and the test flight which was to take place on the following Monday.

The next morning, an extra concerning the ship and its inventor reached the streets and the circulation of the Chronicle jumped a thousandfold. The coming test flight was on everyone's tongue and Professor WASSMER was the most important man in the city at the time.

As for the flight—it went off as scheduled on 10 A. M. Monday morning. Thousands were at the airport and cheered and cheered and cheered. Two bands, one led by HERBERT¹ BAKER and the other by ANTHONY MINCARELLI, played loud military music, but, as the plane rose from the ground, everyone was hushed, silent. Up, up, it went and suddenly, when it was almost out of sight, it burst into flames! Something had gone wrong somewhere, and the rocket ship fell to earth, a hopeless mess, without even having sighted Mars. The government washed its hands of the whole affair, and Professor WASSMER promised never to invent anything again.

Soliloquy

Wonderful world! At last I'm free,
To seek my fortune, bad or good,
I'll search, I'll probe, deep into thee
I'll travel mountain, valley, wood.

I must have some special place
In this wide universe
Something someone wants me for.
To build a house, compose a verse.

I might become an explorer,
And find some undiscovered realm,
I'll sail the ocean of life,
On a boat, with me at the helm.

I'll be needing lots of help
In whatever I set out to do,
Don't desert me now, world,
Cause I'm depending on you.

A Girl At The Game

Hurry Lois we're just on time.
Isn't the day simply divine?
There's the coach and our team,
I'm so excited I could scream.

There is Bobby with a girl,
Her hair looks awfully out of curl.
That was a foul, I saw it too,
Put out the ref, boo! boo!

See the girl in the red dress?
I really think she's a pest.
Why is Bill on the bench?
He'd make that other team retrench.

Hello, Eddie, do you think we'll win?
Just you wait till we begin.
Aren't the players having fun?
Why my goodness! The game is done!

VERNA BENN

What's That

A man who had lost all he owned in the depression
Decided to turn to another profession.
"I'll design ladies' hats," he exclaimed in glee,
"That should be an easy job for me."
In the quiet solitude of a lovely park
He sat and thought for days, from dawn till dark.
At last he drew several hats, sensible and neat
And thought he was great for accomplishing this feat.
Then he boarded a bus and with a mighty sigh
Took a clean sheet and said, "One more I'll try."
He started to draw a sweet little hat,
The bus started to shake—threw him this way and that,
And as he was thrown around in his seat
He drew his straight line all zig-zag, choppy and incomplete.
As his pencil flew over the paper so white
The markings it left resembled a kite.

Then once he went down town and at his very first stop,
He entered the door of an exclusive hat shop.
He spoke to the owner, showed him the fruits of his labor,
The owner looked for a moment, then said, "My dear neighbor,
These modles you have here are neat but not gay,
I'd advise you to throw the whole lot away.
But here is one here that is perfectly right,
And that is the one that resembles the kite!
I'll buy that from you at any price you name
For being a creator of that you'll get money and fame."
The man looked bewildered, said, "It dosen't seem right,
You should like the hat that I thought was a fright.
Women certainly are strange if they like things like that,
And hereafter on a bus, I'll design every hat."

"Suspense"

AFTER glancing fearfully about him, Jack walked noiselessly through the darkened room, restlessly too, for he was nervous. You could easily see that. He paced the length of the room, running his hand nervously through his hair. Suddenly he stopped, looked at his watch, seemed to reach a decision, then dauntlessly strode over to the window. He was afraid, yet he must. Hesitating but a moment he threw up the window to be greeted by a blinding flash of lightning. The rain was blown into small puddles in the dreary deserted street. All was quiet, except for the distant rumbling of the thunder. It was an eerie silence, as though a crime had just been committed.

Swiftly, Jack slammed down the window and silently returned to his nerve-wracking grind. Up and down, up and down. Would he never cease. He paused in front of the mantle his eyes lighted on that devilish piece of mechanism—the clock. It was leering at him, fiendishly ticking away those precious moments. Seven-thirty—only one more hour, 60 fleeting, rushing minutes in which his whole world was to go crashing, or in which, if the fates were kind, he would be spared.

What was he to do? He shivered, became tense. Should he try the phone? No, probably the storm had disconnected it by now. Oh, if only he weren't here alone, he could get it off his mind, just to tell someone would relieve him of all responsibility. He stood, as if listening, then, stealthily as though he were being watched, Jack crept to the window. Afraid, yet eager and hopeful, he again raised the window. Behold! The rain had stopped, a moon was out. He could take Pat to the Prom after all!

CLASS WILL

WE, the graduating class of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty, being in a doubtful state of mind, and in possession of what faculties we pretend to have, do hereby declare and constitute this to be our last will and testament. (Unless, of course, we change our mind and write another one.)

1. To the entire faculty, (bless them) we very graciously give our forgiveness for all the anxiety and worry they've caused us in the past four years.

2. To our athletes—who have always shown the best sportsmanship—we leave one box of "Wheaties" to be divided evenly.

3. To the senior B's we leave that grand and glorious feeling of superiority and we also bequeath that holiest of inner sanctums, Miss Martin's office. (For your O. K.'s of course)

4. To the Juniors with 5th period lunch we leave hot dogs and "cokes."

5. To the poor "inbetweens" the sophomores we leave the consoling thought of their graduation.

6. To the Freshies we leave years and years of study. (Aren't we mean?)

7. To Miss Gordon we give and bequeath (with pleasure) the detention room.

8. To all clubs who go on trips, we give the flag-pole as official meeting place.

9. To the elevator we leave its squeaks and groans for which it is known. (It will have its ups and downs too, you know.)

10. To the students with a delicate sense of smell we bequeath those delicious and appetizing odors that emanate from the chemistry lab.

11. To those mischievous ones, who need kindness, forgiveness and understanding, we leave our best pal, Mr. Ralston.

12. To the entire student body we do hereby bequeath, (with great sorrow) our dearly beloved building. Please take care of it.

13. To the graduating class of February, 1941, we give and bequeath one Indian head penny. (To help with your dues. You'll need it.)

14. To our faculty advisers our most grateful and heartfelt thanks.

In witness thereof, we hereby appoint and designate Mickey Mouse as Chief Executor and Trustee of the above document.

"Crime"

MARGE hurried along the deserted street, with downcast eyes. Her pocketbook, nervously clutched in one hand, suddenly snapped open and the contents went scattering to the pavement. With a gasp of dismay, she bent down and swiftly stuffed them back into her bag. Her eyes darted up and down the long block which was, fortunately, devoid of people. She breathed a sigh of relief. Thank goodness, no one saw it. Of that she was certain—but no, that man seemed to be staring at her. Oh suppose he had seen it, why, he could disrupt her whole plan. Why did she ever undertake it anyway.

Rushing along, Marge began to wonder what the punishment would be if there should be a slip-up, and she were caught. As she neared the next corner, a face loomed in front of her. She knew him! She recognized the man coming toward her. With a pounding heart she quickly ducked into a doorway and proceeded to make a pretext of tying a shoe lace. The man walked by without a glance in her direction. This bolstered her courage and again Marge started out on her mission.

With no further mishaps, Marge reached her destination. Luck was with her, she was on time. With trembling hands, Marge reached into her pocketbook and took out the precious slip. Would he accept it? Suppose he shouldn't. She couldn't go back now. Summoning her courage, Marge thrust the paper through the window. The man glanced at it, then scanned carefully. He looked out into the frightened eyes of Marge. Then, smiling to himself, stamped it and handed her a ticket. And so, after cutting her sixth and seventh periods, Marge finally got in the movies on a pass!

The Senior Prom

MARGIE was so excited that she couldn't sit or stand or walk or do anything but fidget, for that night Bob, the best looking boy in school, was going to take her to the big spring dance. She had spent hours dressing and looked lovely in her first sleek black dress.

After supper, she helped her mother clear the table and was in such a hurry that she put everything in the wrong place. When the doorbell rang she grabbed the coconut custard pie that the family had had for dessert, placed it carelessly on a kitchen chair and flew to the door.

Bob entered looking wonderfully handsome, and carrying a corsage of gardenia's for her.

"I'll get a pin for the corsage," she volunteered and walked, with what she fondly thought was a sophisticated stroll into the kitchen.

Grabbing her mother's work basket, she flopped into the nearest chair to fish for a pin. Hearing a soft, squishy sound and feeling something mushy and moist give way beneath her, she jumped up—but it was too late. Half on the back of her beautiful dress and half on the chair was the fluffy, creamy coconut custard pie!

GERALDYNE IRIS

Courage

It's good to be clever and tactful, and sweet,
It's good to be honest and punctual and neat,
Fortunate are those who are forgiving and kind,
But there is one virtue that's harder to find.
That virtue is courage, and it helps you act gay
When the world is against you things going astray
It helps you smile when you want to cry,
To face your friends proudly and hold your head high.
You played the game and lost, but don't moan like the rest,
Just look ahead cheerfully and say, "I've done my best."
It takes real courage to admit defeat
When it would have been easier to lie and cheat.
But courageous persons—and they're a fortunate few—
Are fine upstanding people and really happy too.
They look straight ahead and never look down,
A smile graces their face and never a frown.
So the people that have courage are the ones I admire,
And to be truly courageous is something I desire.

GERALDYNE IRIS

Reward

Phosphorescent waters of the sea
Upon the shore beat merrily;
And clouds by moonlight softly glow
Reflect their image far below.

Throughout the night stars vigil keep
Till in the distance sunbeams creep,
And heavens blend in pastel shades
As night so slowly, slowly fades.

The sky grows bright and rising sun
Lets forth its colors one by one;
For those who watch throughout the night
Nature's beauty with delight.

"On Parting"

Too bad it had to end this way,
To stop, break off, to cease.
No more crowding up my day,
From now on there'll be peace.

All the noise, the clicking
Are gone forever more,
I'll settle down to living,
My nerves try to restore.

No more bustle and rushing,
No more whispers, giggles, fussing,
Gone are school-day cares.

Ah well! there's still another life,
No more I'll have to wait,
For after four long years,
I'm going to graduate!

CLARE McDERMOTT

My Dreams

My dreams are of a shining knight.
He'll ride upon a stallion white;
Bright helmet plumes freely flowing,
Armor all aglitter and glowing.

My dreams are of a gallant knight.
A gentleman by every right.
To me will he with reverence kneel,
A thought that makes my senses reel.

My dreams are of a fearless knight.
With sword and lance he'll quickly fight.
In battle never at a loss,
For he'll devoutly wear a cross.

My dreams are of a perfect knight.
A "Galahad" of worth and might.
Alas, such knights we find no more,
So I'll just marry the boy next door.

VERNA BENN

"Reunion"

Five long years have passed,
And I am getting old.
But sweet memories always last,
And these I grasp, and hold.

I'll never forget the day,
Life before me lay unfurled.
Education had paved the way,
For my entrance into the world.

I remember standing, sitting,
My face all flushed with pride
I sang my very heart out,
While my mother sat and cried.

That was my graduation,
Most of you were there,
What we called our "liberation"
Was in reality a snare.

How many of you were sorry,
When at last it had to end.
All the fussing, rushing, worry
That fate to us did send.

Well that's all finished, gone,
We've left it all behind
But the memory lingers on—
It will never leave my mind!

CLARE McDERMOTT

WE THE STUDENTS SPEAK!

By Their Idiosyncrasies Shall Ye Know Them

If she's in a heated argument defending the rights of working women in this democracy, it isn't Eleanor Roosevelt, but the very political minded Miss Bailey who stands firmly by her rights.

If he's dramatizing Julius Caesar and doing a very good job of it, it isn't John Barrymore, but our own talented Mr. Wakefield.

If she makes you walk around the room with a book on your head to improve your posture, it isn't Miss Kaufman, the gym teacher, but Miss Boutilier, of the English department, who claims it helps one's poise.

If he insists upon making the pretty girls stand up in study hall as a punishment for talking, it isn't Billy Rose picking a new set of chorus girls, but Mr. Franzblau who claims talking annoys him.

If he is a very quiet, patient and understanding teacher, he isn't a saint sent from heaven, but Mr. Walling of the Secretarial Department.

Take the Level Road

There are few short cuts to success and they usually prove rough going.

The smooth way is that usually traversed by men who think right and have courage and the will to labor for what they get.

Study them, follow their example and you will gain your objective even if it does take a little longer to get there.

WHY? Why should you patronize "Cog 'N' Pen" advertisers? It's just the FAIR thing to do when you consider that advertisers contributed about 25% of the income of YOUR yearbook. Besides it's just good business for a Centralite to show his appreciation by trying "Cog 'N' Pen" advertisers first—they are reliable—they are deservant.

Arthur Chernin

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

The businessmen and school executives who placed advertisements in our yearbook EXPECT results—they have a right to.

SO—try our advertisers;
buy from our advertisers;
recommend them to your parents and friends.

"Always say, 'I saw your "AD" in Central High School's yearbook'."
